Episode

For example, we can find the device characteristics (i.e., resolution and frame rate) of some videos posted on the official YouTube channel of the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR):

```
$ python3 -c 'import pydub; audio = pydub.read("D:\carsound\sig0.mp3")' $ python3 Python 3.5.2 (default, Oct 16 2018, 20:06:32) [MSC v.1900 32 bit (Intel)] on win32. >>> print(audio) >>> print(audio.stream.frame_rate) 44100 >>> print(audio.stream.rate) 44100 >>> print(audio.stream.width) 1920 >>> print(audio.stream.duration) [1 seconds]
```

For binary data, we can use the list methods `count`, `most_common`, and `sum` to count the number of occurrences of a string of bytes:

```
$ python3 -c 'import os; data = open("D:\carsound\sig0.mp3", "rb").read()' $ python3 Python 3.5.2 (default, Oct 16 2018, 20:06:32) [MSC v.1900 32 bit (Intel)] on win32 >>> print(data.count("B4")) 2 >>> print(data.count("B3")) 1 >>> print(data.count("B2")) 0 >>> print(data.count("B1")) 0 >>> print(data.count("0F")) 0
```

We can also take advantage of the fact that bytes are equivalent to integers and view a binary file as an integer file:

```
$ python3 Python 3.5.2 (default, Oct 16 2018, 20:06:32) [MSC v.1900 32 bit (Intel)] on win32 >>> import sys >>> data = open("D:\carsound\sig0.mp3", "rb") >>> for i in data: ... sys.stdout.write(chr(i)) ... 0000 0001 0010 0001 0011 0011
```

Once the audio file is read, we can
